Orientation continues through the year

Indianapolis has been introduced to bus loads of beanie-clad freshmen in the past several days. In fact, Marian College has been introduced to these same freshmen in many and varied ways.

Student leaders, faculty, and staff members have been planning for the arrival of these newcomers since early spring. They have tried to design programs to attend to the needs of the bewildered freshman. This year's committee seems to have covered every need from helping the student unload his tons of luggage from the car to familiarizing him with the campus to providing him with the opportunity to meet others in social activities.

After the traditional welcome, freshmen were offered a variety of tours. Campus tours were provided by both staff and stuall year long, just as any student does. Therefore, the orientation committee has designed a long range program whereby students can find the help they need, whenever they need it.

The entire freshmen class was divided into groups of approximately fifteen members. These groups are balanced according to sex and status (commuter-dorm student). These groups plan to meet once a week to discuss pertinent topics. The location and time of these meetings is entirely the decision of the group. A set of topics has been provided but this schedule is not required. First semester, the freshmen plan to deal with such topics as effective listening, study skills, human interpersonal relations, vocational planning and drug abuse. Second semester, topics concerned with personal growth and development will be considered. Recommended topics are goals of life, establishing self worth, feelings and emotions, the struggle to become a person and the lonely person.

dents. Gary Yohler treated the students and their parents to an armchair tour of the campus, while student leaders conducted walking tours. The library tour included a discussion of library facilities and how to use them. Visits were made to staff and administration offices where the freshmen learned about available services. A visit to the all new Academic and Vocational Planning Center reassured the students that help was available.

Orientation included a very crowded social calendar where freshmen were able to meet fellow freshmen and other Marian students.

Janice Dwire, freshman, commented, "Everyone has been so helpful. I'm able to find places rather easily and I'm even getting to know a lot of people."

But orientation must last longer than one week. Freshmen are impressed with the fact that the services they have been introduced to in their first week are continuing services—services that will be available to them the entire year.

Freshmen encounter problems

A professional staff member will be assigned to each group to serve as a facilitator. Each person who has been assigned to guide a group has had professional training in counseling and will be available on an individual basis should the need arise.

The office of counseling services is responsible for coordinating these efforts and will provide a variety of supportive services to enhance the effectiveness of the program in the form of tapes and special speakers.

Mr. Van Hoose describes the over-all purpose of these efforts. "Our purpose is to realize the potential of this college to be a real personal experience for every person who comes here. Hopefully the result will be that our community will deal in a variety of ways with the personal needs, concerns, and frustrations that students typically feel."

Michele Doran, freshman, feels that Marian College is doing just that. "I feel so welcome—Everyone's trying so hard to be helpful."

Federal grant

Marian Lake area becomes wetland laboratory

Marian College has received a $25,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to develop a demonstration model of a Wetland Ecological Laboratory on the marshlands next to the campus lake.

Five thousand dollars has been distributed thus far for a feasibility study of the area and enlisting the services of the necessary consultants.

Next year the remaining twenty thousand dollars will be leased for the actual setting up of the laboratory outside of actual construction work. Funds are being solicited for this phase of the project.

The laboratory will be used to confine animal and plant life ordinarily found in a wetland area to a limited space for observation and study. This will give biology students an opportunity to further their studies and it is also hoped that education students will benefit through the presentation of guided tours.

John Ripley Forbes, President of the Natural Science for Youth Foundation and a representative will be helping with the consultation.

Brother Charles Severin, C.S.F., an expert in field work from St. Mary's College in Winona, Minnesota, also involved in the consultation work, will be arriving next month to identify the plant life already existing in the area and help set up keys for identification. Dr. Dennis Clarke, a former faculty member will do some of the surveying of animal life.

Tranquil Marian Lake is the site of the outdoor laboratory funded by the HEW grant.

Grants for study abroad available now

The Institute of International Education has announced the official opening of the 1973-74 competition for grants for graduate study or research abroad and for professional training in the creative and performing arts.

These grants, whose purpose is to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries through the exchange of persons, knowledge, and skills, are provided under the terms of the Mutual Education and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (Fulbright-Hays Act) and by foreign governments, universities and private donors. It is expected that approximately 550 awards to 37 countries will be available for 1973-74.

Application forms and information for students currently enrolled in Marian College may be obtained from the campus Fulbright Program Adviser Sister Rachel Schulte. The deadline for filing applications through the FPA on this campus is October 15, 1972.

Thought

Thought from Gibran

Knowledge and understanding are life's faithful companions who will never prove untrue to you. For knowledge is your crown, and understanding your staff; and when they are with you, you can possess no greater treasures.

Opportunity for free expression is yours

In our country at least, the newspaper has come to be regarded as a forum for free expression, a place where anyone is free to voice opinions on any topic.

In other times and other places, freedom of the press was strictly forbidden and even the holding of opinions, views, ideals, was strictly controlled. In some places these conditions still persist. But ever since the colonial days of John Peter Zenger, freedom of the press has been one of America's most treasured traditions. It is more than a tradition, however, for the press, and its freedom of expression, is engulfed in the mainstream of all the changes that helped shape today and are shaping our tomorrows. Through this vehicle of individual expression, the individual has been heard. He has been able to contribute a view that may not have been considered before; he has been able to initiate changes in his society. He is continuing to do so today.

This is one tradition, one freedom, that must be kept for future generations. It is a tradition, a freedom, a privilege, that all men in all countries should have a part in.

This is the policy the PHOENIX feels it can do no less than give its ardent support and encouragement to. We feel that all students should have an opportunity to express any opinion on any topic. We offer to the students of Marian, and anyone who has any views they wish to share, the opportunity to be heard. We feel obligated to give space to all views, for indeed, this is the right of all--to be heard in an atmosphere free of prejudice concerning what they wish to say; to be respected for their views, however much they may differ from our own; to be answered in their queries. In truth, we cannot give this right to you as an opportunity, for, in truth, it is something we cannot give. It is already yours.

Freshmen discuss new college experience

To the upperclassmen, Marian has become home. They know what it's all about and what to expect from it. However, the Freshmen still have a lot of "experiencing" to do. A survey was taken of some of the newest members of the campus to find out just how they have found the school so far and what they expect from it.

Freshmen from Gary, Indiana, Tom Kasper and Ed Krusa came to Marian as friends but, at the time of this survey, had different views of the school. Tom thought that "the people in charge needed to know what was going on" in order to help out the freshmen more efficiently. He did like the men: women ratio and, as a whole, felt that Marian is "a nice school."

Ed, however, was more enthusiastic. He was "impressed with the people" and added that "everything's personal here."

Steve Barrett from Alexandria, Indiana, echoes Ed's enthusiasm in saying that "the faculty really helps you out."

Three freshmen girls, Lisa, Kathy, and Karen, voiced more personal opinions. They think that Marian is great although they did have a difficult time in tracking down sports equipment. They also found some upperclassmen to be "really nice."

Two girls who wish to remain anonymous were not as happy. They found the social life on campus rather dull.

Joan, from Lafayette, Indiana, "loves it." She found Marian all that she had hoped it to be. "The teachers are more personal and that's something you can't get from a big university like Purdue."

Pat from Plainfield also thinks the faculty is great. "They make you feel like they really care."

"Everybody's really friendly," according to Linda Price from Edinburg, Indiana.

We don't expect everybody to love Marian. Just give it a chance, and as a senior resident assistant said the first night, "It grows on you."

Letter

The Executive Board of the Marian College Student Association has already begun work on several different topics concerning students. We have broken down the specific issues into four areas: 1) Revision of the Liquor Policy, 2) Student Representation on the Board of Trustees, 3) Political Information Committee, 4) Student Board Office Revision. Assistance is needed on all four of these committees. I invite any student, who might be interested, to either work on the research or merely join in the discussions on these topics. We especially need students to become active in the Political Information Committee. If you have or wish to actively campaign for any candidate or even if you are non-partisan but wish to help register students, please get into this Committee now! Contact myself or any Board member if you are interested. Times and places of meetings will be announced next week.

Freshmen encounter Marian life

When the class of '76 comes back as sophomores, many things will be said about their freshmen days.

"... Remember when those horrid sophomores attacked us with shaving cream and all that jello ... and dancing in the cafeteria ..."

Many memories will be stirred then but right now what is to be remembered is still happening.

Still as conspicuous as the beanies they wore last week are the Freshmen. They've been through a lot-- the rigors of registration, getting used to different hours and cafeteria food besides feeling disoriented at not knowing a single soul. But, with the help(?) of the sophomore class and the rest of the people involved with the orientation program, they are gradually learning the atmosphere of Marian College. Of course, it'll take a while to get settled beyond getting matching bedspreads and drapes and learning to do your own wash, but there'll always be somebody around to turn to -officially(see page 1) or otherwise and pretty soon these experiences will be just memories.

Juniors sponsor movie, coffeehouse

The junior class is the sponsor of this week's Saturday Night at the Movies. The film is THE BABY MAKER, an R-rated movie, probably the first to be shown on Marian's campus. Following the movie, scheduled to last from 8-11 p.m., there will be a coffee house in the Perc also sponsored by the juniors. There will be some familiar and some new faces. For those of you who missed Greg Rodick's performance last weekend, you will get another chance this weekend. A trio who we've seen and heard before with pleasure, is also scheduled -- Merle Tebbe, Chris Eckrich, and Jon Randall.

Third on the list is a new team consisting of Marty Risch and Anne Johnson, two new faces on campus.

Doyle presents "The Priest's Wife"

Film marriages aren't made in Hollywood or in heaven. They're made by box-office receipts, by a public enthralled with two stars and clamoring to see them "together again". The film marriage of Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni is possibly the prime example. They've made seven pictures together, all great box-office successes.

Warner Bros.' "The Priest's Wife," a Technicolor comedy will be shown Sept. 22 at 8:00 p.m. ($75) on campus sponsored by Doyle Hall. The film revolves around the romance between a beautiful pop singer and a priest, and their efforts to reconcile his allegiance to the Church and his love for her.

According to Mastroianni, he and Miss Loren are popular because they're opposites. "Sophia is everything a woman should be," he says, "beautiful, intelligent, in control. I'm 45, lazy, have a few wrinkles. But I'm a virile man, and when I look at her, sparks fly. Maybe that's what comes across on the screen."

"The Priest's Wife" was produced by Carlo Ponti and directed by Dino Risi.

Summer job enlightens Marian coed

by Kathy Giesting

The world is really an interesting place to visit but I'm not too sure I'd want to live there too long. I mean, it's okay to be bored for three months or so as long as there are a few others around in the same position as you. Spend your summer in a factory....meet the people who keep the world running. Peopleit's terrible to see people who work in a factory all their life.... mostly for the money. The saddest are the young kids. I had something to look forward to.... the day I could quit work and go back to school. They can look forward to 8-hour days of monotony which they hope as they gain seniority involve less work... while the monotony remains. The few bright spots in his day are the breaks....you learn to live each day of work from break to to break within the first week.

The older people are different. They center their concerns on whether they are ahead or behind the production rate and whether they can find a reason to make a scene and have the union stand behind them. There are a few who really surprise you....like the two guys I got into a big discussion with on Nixon and McGovern and communism....I heard some echoes of McCarthyism there.

Prejudice....it's a dirty word to me even if it doesn't have four letters. With a young black foreman who believed in getting the job done, I heard a lot of griping and complaining....more than I heard about any of the other foremen in our department. Even black workers were derided, almost to their faces and often within their hearing, by the older white workers....it hurt me just to hear them and know they would probably never know that people are people no matter what their color or whether they have curly hair or straight hair, blue eyes or brown.

This is an evaporator...anyway that's what they told us it was...somehow it is part of an auto air conditioner.

Butch says college is a factory just like the one we worked in. The evaporator cores are the students who go through all the tests for leaks, getting charged with Freon, the wisdom that makes them "cool." Some of them fail the first time around but they keep on going around and getting repairs and coming back again. You see them on the conveyor hanging together in groups. Sometimes you'll see what you think is an individual, hanging separately, but it ends up with all the rest...on the line charged with Freon.

And this is just one department! The whole factory is a huge university with degrees in Evaporators, Condensers, Hoses, Refrigerators, and other subjects. The "students" in these other schools look a little different, but a visit to Salvage...a sort of counseling and rehabilitation center...shows you they are all the same when you look a little closer.

But Butch is bitter, after a year at Ball State, he has two years in the army to look forward to and doesn't have any plans for any time but the immediate future until he's drafted. Now I hear that they aren't going to draft any people after the first of January, but I think a volunteer army is something of a dream. It's too ideal, but it makes a great campaign issue, I must admit.

Now, what was this column supposed to be about? The college student and the real world... it's really sad that I should be able to write such an article. We seem so separated from the reality of the world sometimes. College is supposed to prepare us to live with the realities of life, but the "ivory tower" college just helps to keep its students from facing the world straight on for four years, after which many of them aren't any better prepared to face the world than they were earlier. Oh, sure the schools have some programs that involve the community in which it's located, but only too often students don't get involved because it's easier to sit back, concerned with only their own immediate world.

And once again I'm rambling far afield and I've got to finish this pretty soon or they'll cut off the end of it to make it fit. It's something to think about, the separation, it's something, somebody should do something about...oh, I'm not copping out...the somebody should be you and me and society, because we really do have something to give to them.
